Billion-dollar ring smashed

Officials strike at drug cartel

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal authorities have smashed a billion-dollar international operation laundering drug money and forced Colombia's Medellin cartel to alter the way it handles drug profits, the Justice Department said Wednesday.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, FBI Director William Sessions and other top law enforcement officials said their "Operation Polar Cap" has ended with charges against 127 people and two Latin American banks.

Thornburgh called the investigation "the largest money-laundering crackdown ever carried out by the federal government."

Agents seized a half ton of cocaine and $45 million in cash, jewels and real estate.

Civil actions have also been filed in an effort to seize as much as $412 million more in assets of the banks, Banco de Occidente of Panama and Banco de Occidente of Colombia, that are deposited in U.S. bank accounts.

The operation, reaching across the United States into South America and to England, had direct ties to the Medellin drug cartel of Colombia and laundered $1.2 billion over two years, Justice Department officials said.

The cartel is responsible for as much as 80 percent of the cocaine flowing into the United States, according to federal drug officials.

"There is no more effective way to deal with the business of drug trafficking than to take the profit out of it," Thornburgh said at a news conference. "That's what has happened with Operation Polar Cap."

"I think it's fair to describe this operation as a very hostile takeover of a major money laundering operation," he said.

Some of the defendants were still being sought Wednesday, including a Colombian holed up in a bank in Panama to elude Panamanian Defense Forces seeking to arrest him for U.S. authorities.

U.S. officials said the laundering operation played a significant role in the handling of the cartel's illegal drug proceeds and was known within the drug world as "La Mina," or "The Mine."

Agents learned of the ring while operating an undercover money-laundering operation of their own in Atlanta as part of a joint investigation by federal agencies, including the Internal Revenue Service and Drug Enforcement Agency.

Authorities said that undercover agents received complaints from alleged drug-world figures that they were moving too slowly in their laundering, or processing the money into seemingly legitimate accounts.

The agents were told La Mina could get the money by wire from Los Angeles to Panama within 48 hours, according to court documents released with the indictments.

Federal agents then expanded their investigation into that operation, using electronic intercepts, surveillance and pursuit of financial paper trails.

Thornburgh said that it is difficult to determine just how much impact the federal action will have on the Medellin cartel.

"Common sense tells me when you disrupt an operation that has laundered over a billion dollars in two years, you're going to force some adjustment in their operation."

DEA administrator John Lawn said that one indication of the effect was seen immediately by drug agents.

When La Mina was forced out of business, he said, "the phone was ringing off the hook" at the undercover money-laundering operation that was continuing in Atlanta, with requests for use of their services.

Fletcher takes job as fusion director

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Resigning NASA Director James Fletcher confirmed he will return to the University of Utah, where he served as president from 1964 to 1971, to head up the state's efforts to cash in on a purported breakthrough in nuclear fusion research.

Gov. Norm Bangertter will call the Legislature back into special session April 7 to appropriate $5 million for the program Fletcher will direct.

U of U President Chase N. Peterson said late Tuesday that Fletcher was expected to return to Utah sometime next week to begin pulling the program together.

Meanwhile, U of U chemistry professor B. Stanley Pons, who along with British researcher Martin Fleischmann announced last week that they had created nuclear fusion, reported Wednesday that graphics illustrating the experiment apparently had been stolen.

School officials said the "overheads" had been missing since last Thursday. "They had to have been stolen. They were not mislaid," said university spokeswoman Barbara A. Shelley.

She indicated the illustrations may have disappeared at the March 23 news conference where Pons was surrounded by reporters and curious scientists.

Fletcher, 69, who has an academic background in physics, said he is optimistic about the future of so-called "cold-fusion" research in Utah.

"If they do (verify the experiment), it is really something gangbusters. In terms of breakthroughs it would certainly be a bigger factor than the transistor when that was built," Fletcher said in Washington.

"But the jury is still out. We still have to verify it. I don't know the people that were involved and what their competencies are. But as near as I can tell it's good," he added.

Legislative leaders initially opposed having a special session so soon after adjournment in February of the general session, but changed their minds after being briefed by Peterson and other backers of the commercialization program.

On March 23, Peterson announced that Pons and Fleischmann had created nuclear fusion — turning hydrogen into helium — with the accompanying release of energy in experiments at the school.

The implications of such a discovery are enormous — cheap, safe, simple electrical power in an era dominated by petroleum-fueled political tensions.

Unita forest service, Utah County step up enforcement of ORV laws

By JIM RAYBURN
Universe Staff Writer

Utah County and the Uinta National Forest Service are combining to step up enforcement of off-road vehicle violations in hopes of preserving the watershed and beauty along the Wasatch Front.

In a meeting Wednesday with the Utah County Commissioners and officials from the Utah County Sheriff's Office, Don Nebeker, forest supervisor for the Uinta National Forest, said off-road vehicles (ORVs) are destroying valuable watershed and scaring the mountaineers along the Wasatch Front.

"This is a problem that is growing in magnitude," said Nebeker. "Not only is the watershed being destroyed, but the beauty of our mountains is at stake."

County agrees to partnership

Brent Morris, county commissioner, said the county has agreed to be partners with the Forest Service in solving the problems created by ORVs. He said the mayors from Utah County cities will need to become involved if efforts to stop ORVs from damaging the mountaineers are going to be effective.

"Mayors have got to be imminently involved in this," said Morris. "A combined effort with the cities, the Forest Service and the sheriff's department and by putting pressure on legislators to enact stricter regulations is the only way we are going to solve this problem."

Nebeker said only one-fourth of the land damaged by ORVs belongs to the Uinta National Forest. He said the majority of the land damaged by ORVs belongs to the state, the county or private individuals. He said roads used by Utah Power & Light to maintain their lines and old gravel pits give ORVs access to the mountains.

Three laws violated

Alex Hunt, a sergeant with the patrol division of the Utah

County Sheriff's Office, said there are three laws that are commonly violated by ORV users. He said it is illegal for ORVs to destroy watershed. All public land is closed to ORVs unless the land is posted as being open to ORV use, he said. He also said many ORV users trespass on private property.

Morris said stricter enforcement of the three laws is the best way of taking immediate action to keep ORVs from damaging the mountaineers. He said the county will need to review these laws and decide if there is a need for stricter local ordinances.

"Our best deterrent is going to be enforcement. It's time we wake people up and let them know we are going to solve this problem," said Morris.

According to Hunt, the sheriff's office issued 300 citations last year for violations of ORV laws. He said there were some instances where the sheriff's office impounded the ORVs. Hunt said the sheriff's office received several complaints from parents every time an ORV was impounded.

Stricter sentencing needed

John Allan, deputy attorney from the Utah County Attorney's Office, said the importance of this enforcement needs to be stressed to the courts so the judges can pass stricter sentences to violators of ORV laws.

"Perhaps if a judge gave a violator some community service time to go along with a fine, then they would think twice before doing it again," said Allan.

Capt. Owen Quarnberg of the Utah County Sheriff's Office, said citizens need to become aware of the problems caused by ORVs. He said citizen committees and cooperation from local police departments is essential if ORV damage is going to be eliminated.

Nebeker said there are places where people can legally ride their ORVs. He said the public can find out where to legally ride ORVs by contacting the nearest Forest Service office.

The Prince William Sound is covered with the worst oil spill in U.S. history. Crews are attempting to block the advance of oil in sensitive Alaskan fishing areas.

Almost no hope of containing spill

Oil slick spreads beyond 500 square miles of Alaskan waters

Associated Press

VALDEZ, Alaska — The worst oil spill in U.S. history has spread beyond 500 square miles in one of the nation's most productive fishing regions, officials said Wednesday, as crews all but abandoned hope of containment.

A former oil industry official charged that outbacks had left operators of the Port of Valdez with ill-maintained booms, no barge to take oil and virtually no properly trained people to respond to the disaster.

Three top administration officials met with representatives of the oil industry and state and federal agencies to assess the cleanup of 10.1 million gallons of crude oil spilled from the 987-foot tanker Exxon Valdez.

Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner, Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Bill Reilly, Coast Guard Commandant Paul Yost and Gov. Steve Cowper flew by helicopter over oil-stained beaches late Tuesday, but the federal officials declined to comment.

President Bush said the federal government may take over the cleanup if it is determined Exxon Company, USA is not doing enough.

In Washington, however, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater cited "good cooperation" in the effort to stop the oil slick, and suggested a federal takeover of the cleanup may not be necessary.

"It was a brief conversation, but Secretary Skinner reported good cooperation between the various authorities involved," Fitzwater said.

Frustrated fishermen mobilized their fleet to defend sensitive fisheries habitat as yet untouched by the growing oil slick.

The area affected by the spill exceeds 500 square miles in the once-pristine waters of Prince William Sound, according to an Alaska representative of the National Wildlife Federation.

Using absorbent oil booms provided by the state Department of Environmental Conservation, dozens of fishermen wearing black armbands tried to block the advance of oil into Main Bay, Eshamy Bay and Port San Juan.

"Frankly, we are past attempting to recover much oil," said the conservation department's Larry Dietrick.

Bids to restore Provo street

are within UDOT estimates

JELENE YOUNG
Universe Staff Writer

All bids for the resurfacing of Provo's University Avenue, scheduled to begin in April, came in under official estimates of the Utah Department of Transportation, said a UDOT public information official.

Kevin Beckstrom said all of the three bids received Tuesday were under UDOT's official estimate of $2,742,666. The low bid of $2,272,780 was submitted by Orem-based Geneva Rock Products.

"This is about a half of a million dollars under the official estimate," Beckstrom said.

However, a contract will not be awarded until the bids are reviewed to make sure there were no errors and that all requirements were met, he said.

"The next step is to get a contract hammered out," he said, which could be awarded as soon as the end of the week.

The construction project will completely remove the old surface of University Avenue between 300 South and 800 North and replace it with a concrete surface.

Beckstrom said this is similar to the reconstruction that took place on State Street last year.

The project will begin at the south end of the project and move block by block, keeping four blocks of University Avenue under construction at a time, he said. Construction will not exceed 30 days on a block.

Beckstrom said the bids were for 95 working days, and construction will be completed in September or October.

Beckstrom said Freedom Boulevard will be used as a detour around the University Avenue reconstruction. Access to businesses in the construction area will be through back entrances and sidewalks.

Resurfacing consists of removing the old surface of the road and replacing it with 11 inches of concrete. The concrete is expected to last 50 years without major repairs, Beckstrom said. While the surface is removed, Provo's old water lines under the road will also be replaced, he said.

Czech hijackers hoped to go to America

FRANKFURT, West Germany — Two Czechoslovak teen-agers, aged 15 and 16, shot their way onto a jetliner Wednesday at Ruzyně Airport in Prague and ordered it to the United States, but the crew convinced them it couldn't fly that far and they gave up in Frankfurt.

They surrendered when American military would not let them enter the U.S. Air Force base adjacent to Frankfurt's commercial airport. The Hungarian agency MTI said Lajos Taba, Hungarian consul general in Prague, boarded the aircraft and negotiated the release of 82 passengers, including all women and children, trading himself for them.

Taba was among the 11 passengers when the plane landed in Frankfurt. There also was a crew of four.

Hans Neitzel, chief spokesman for the Frankfurt police, said he did not know the hijackers' motives.

"They said they wanted to go to America, but why they wanted to go, whether they have relatives there or what, we don't know," he said. "Maybe it was just youthful adventure."

Karl-Heinz Wagner, another police spokesman, said the teen-agers carried a sawed-off shotgun, a rifle and a fake hand grenade. Police said no one was hurt and the incident ended peacefully less than three hours after its violent start.

Report says doctors aid in patient suicide

BOSTON — Doctors can ethically help terminally ill patients commit suicide by prescribing sleeping pills or other drugs and telling them what dose will end their lives, a panel of prominent doctors concludes.

Doctors assisting patients in suicides "is certainly not rare," although they don't often talk about it, the group said.

It added, however, that if doctors ease the way for death by carefully attending to the comfort and dignity of their hopelessly ill patients, requests for suicide should be rare.

The suicide guidelines were part of a report outlining doctors' responsibilities toward their dying patients. Among other things, the paper urged doctors to give such patients as much pain medicine as they need to relieve their suffering, even if it hastens their deaths.

"We really think that the physician has a responsibility to be actively involved in creating an environment in which a peaceful death can occur. That does not just happen," said Dr. Sidney H. Wanzer, principal author of the report.

Report adds evidence to slow economy

WASHINGTON — The government reported Wednesday that its chief economic forecasting gauge dropped 0.3 percent in February, corroborating other signs of a slowdown in the economic expansion.

Last month's decline in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, a composite of forward-looking business statistics, was matched by a comparable dip last September and was the biggest drop since a fall of 0.8 percent last July.

Analysts said February's decline was consistent with other recent signals that the economy may be losing steam — welcome news to those who say growth must slow in order to keep inflation from spiraling.

"This should reduce concern about the economy overheating, while the decline is not sharp enough to give any signal of a recession," said Jerry Jasnowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers.

Others, however, are concerned that the economy will slow too much and that the Federal Reserve Board's yearlong campaign to raise interest rates and dampen inflationary pressures will stifle growth altogether.

Economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch & Co. said Federal policy-makers are "doing what they have to do" to cure inflation, with a recession likely to be the unintended side effect.

FDIC rescues $18 billion Dallas bank

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators said Wednesday they had seized control of most of MCorp, an $18 billion, Dallas-based bank holding company, pumping in $300 million in what will likely become the third largest commercial bank rescue ever.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. packaged 20 MCorp subsidiary banks into a new, government-owned institution with $15.4 billion in assets and $11.6 billion in deposits. Left alone were five still-solvent subsidiary banks and a trust company.

L. William Seidman, chairman of the FDIC, which insures commercial bank deposits up to $100,000, said the agency will seek buyers for the new institution. He declined to estimate how much government aid will ultimately be required, saying he did not want to reveal the figure to potential bidders.

Private analysts have said they expect the failure will cost the FDIC, already depleted by a post-Depression record of 221 bank failures last year, $1 billion to $2 billion.

50 witnesses possible in murder trial

FARMINGTON — Up to 50 witnesses could be called in the first-degree murder trial of Thomas W. Randolph Jr., charged with the 1986 shooting death of his wife.

Jury selection in the capital murder trial of Randolph, 34, is scheduled to begin Monday in 2nd District Court.

In addition to the murder, the Weber County man is charged with making a false insurance claim in the Nov. 7, 1986, death of Becky Rae Gault Randolph. She was found dead in the couple's Clearfield home of a single gunshot wound to the head. A medical examiner ruled her death a suicide, but police claim they now have evidence linking Randolph to the woman's death. Court records indicate Randolph received more than $250,000 in insurance benefits following his wife's death.

Second District Judge Rodney S. Page told prosecutors and defense attorneys they each would have 13 peremptory challenges during jury selection. A peremptory challenge enables attorneys to dismiss potential jurors without cause.

Church group hears drug addicts speak

By HISAYOSHI IWAMITSU
Senior Reporter

Utah drug abuse problems have encouraged a local ward of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to invite drug addicts to speak to their ward assembly.

The Slate Canyon 5th Ward, 1350 E. 900 S. in Provo, with the permission of the Utah County Jail in Provo, had three individuals speak at a March 12 fireside.

One of the participants was a woman in the county jail serving time for a drug-related crime; the other two were men who were recently released from jail. The 5th Ward asked them to talk to the local Church members about their personal experiences.

The ward bishop, Russell Reynolds, said the purpose of the fireside was to give youths an opportunity to get acquainted with negative consequences triggered by drug abuse.

"This is the first opportunity to have drug addicts at the meeting," and the audience had a strong feeling against drugs, he said.

He said feedback from the ward members, including Timpview High School and Farrer Junior High School students and their parents, was very supportive. "We would like to have another one" because having someone who has actually been a drug user might persuade youths not to use drugs, he said.

Reynolds said the three speakers explained how they started using drugs.

He said they indicated that drugs looked like a lot of fun in the beginning and that they gradually became independent individuals away from their families. Then, all of a sudden, they realized that using drugs became a kind of habit and that they could never get out of it.

An interesting thing Reynolds learned from their speech, he said, is that drug users try to reach the same "high" they received the first time they took drugs. Consequently, they used more drugs and had to do some illegal things to find money to purchase drugs.

According to research conducted by the state Division of Substance Abuse in March 1985, an estimated 70,300 Utahns were regular users of marijuana; approximately 64,300 Utahns were regular users of one or more of the following other drugs: cocaine, heroin, amphetamines, sedatives, tranquilizers and/or analgesics.

Alan Sherwood, program coordinator of the Utah Division of Substance Abuse, said the percent of high school seniors who used various drugs during the past months was lower than the national average, but the rates of some drugs used by the seniors were higher than the national rates.

For instance, the Utah rate of tranquilizers, at 3.4 percent, was 1.3 percent higher than the national rate, and the rate of LSD, at 4.0 percent, was 2.5 percent higher than the national.

He said Utah definitely needs "prevention and treatment programs, particularly for youths."

Randy Merrill, assistant principal of Timpview High School in Provo, said that even though anti-drug programs at Timpview have been nationally recognized, it does not help the who have already abused drugs to be added to drugs.

"But the program does help students who have never used drugs," he said. As part of the program, according to Merrill, the school periodically invites guest speakers to give information relating to drug crimes and consults students on an everyday basis.

Rapport, openness needed with students

On March 16, Pres. Holland announced that beginning Fall Semester 1989, students will be required to prove they have insurance or they will be billed for BYU's.

Many argue the university has no right to compel insurance from students. Others see the intent of university officials.

Regardless of these arguments, The Daily Universe believes a more important issue needs to be addressed — openness.

To be sure, the administration sought student feelings and input in making decisions, and, probably, such decisions were made carefully.

But we can't be sure because the decisions were not made openly. A premise for America's open meeting's laws is that, with few exceptions, the best decisions are made openly. The Daily Universe believes this premise. It is what democracy is all about.

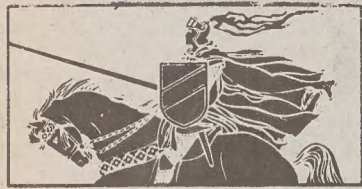

In our recent meeting with Pres. Holland, he said his line here is professional, not ecclesiastical, even though he felt he has a calling as university president. If it is the case that the administration here is a professional line, then we need to leave the closed-door decisions to the ecclesiastical authorities on the Board of Trustees, and we should open the doors to decisions made by professionals at BYU.

We feel that the administration's duty is more than seeking student input, we feel it is to be more open in the decision-making process.

The above editorials are the opinion of the Daily Universe Editorial Board, which is comprised of the associate publisher, editor, opinion page editor, a teacher of opinion writing and a student staff member. Daily Universe opinions are not necessarily those of Brigham Young University, its administration or sponsoring church.

The Editorial Board meetings are every Tuesday at 11 a.m. in 541 ELWC. If there is a forum or devotional the meeting will begin at 10 a.m.

Social security tips

Before your first job, a Social Security card was necessary. Since then, you have been known as a nine digit number. The purpose of the number is to keep track of earnings throughout your life. When you begin working, your social security card must be shown to your employer as a form of identification. Your earnings will be reported to government agencies.

If you lose your Social Security card or change your name, you must apply for a replacement card. You will also be asked to provide proof of citizenship or legal alien status.

Private institutions such as BYU, are allowed to use your Social Security number for their records. There are precautions every individual should take to ensure the safety of their records. First, make sure you know what your number is going to be used for before you reveal it. Second, do not voluntarily display your card or number to unauthorized personnel. Third, make periodic checks on your records. This may be done over the telephone in some states. Fourth, keep your W-2 forms to compare with your social security records. Finally, be sure mail containing your number is forwarded to the correct address.

If you move a lot, have your mail forwarded. Change of address forms are at the post office. Have your address changed on the records where your number is used (including BYU, banks, employment offices, etc.).

Most people will never experience a problem with their number, but if someone does use it incorrectly, it is your responsibility to prove there was an error. People have used another's social security number and name to avoid taxes, to get loans or credit or to open accounts with utility companies. In most cases a check is done on identification and background, but there are exceptions.

Is there a depression awaiting graduates?

April graduation is nearing again, and the class of '89 has begun interviewing for jobs they expect will be theirs now that they've paid the high price of education.

Those who aren't graduating move forward with anticipation of employment security when they finish at BYU. Few seem anxious about the future. Most trust the four-year plan they invested in will pay off when they finally leave BYU.

But with the U.S. spending more than it saves, some economists are predicting a major economic recession and possibly another 30s-scale depression within the next few years. And that isn't good news for this year's graduating class. Whether these economic traumas will occur is speculation.

Some economists argue this speculation is foolish because the economy has grown at a steady 2.5 to 3 percent annual rate for several years, and inflation is at a low 3 percent. Many economists also claim the media feed hysteria about depression and this may influence the market. With the healthy recovery of the stock market after the 1987 crash, economists are sure the economy is going up, not down.

Economist Anatole Kaletsky doesn't expect a 1930-scale depression. He believes the economy is deteriorating for now, but will later grow quite strong. And a new group of theorists—Wall Street's new wave economists—believe financial markets, not the government, control the economy and have positioned it in modest, non-inflationary growth.

But Feb. 23 brought bad news to Wall Street. Stocks slumped and interest rates soared after January's sharp 0.6 percent rise in consumer prices.

Fed chairman Alan Greenspan, told the press, "if inflation re-emerges, I think a recession will move up on us much more quickly than we can imagine." French economists say Americans have continued to avoid economic adjustment by devaluing the dollar and lowering interest rates, throwing the economy grossly out of balance. Financial consultant Ashby Bladen points out the real reason for economic slumps is excessive burdens of debt; as long as the U.S. continues to borrow, it is headed for trouble.

What if another Great Depression does hit the world within the next couple of years? How badly will it affect the United States, and more importantly, the BYU graduating class of '89 and those to follow?

During the 30s depression, unemployment soared to 25 percent. We can expect that number to be higher this time as more people rely on business and industry rather than farming for employment as they did in the 30s.

Seniors graduating in the next few years may not be able to find professional employment if the economy worsens. Good jobs may not last long because business failures will increase.

Another depression will cause foreclosures to rise, and those students who have recently graduated and bought new houses may lose them and be forced to move in with other family members.

Those who know how to grow food will be fortunate as money to buy fuel and supermarket goods could become scarce. Cash will be king. Savings will become fashionable again, and second-hand shopping might become necessary. Recently graduated students, expecting to purchase computers and new cars, may not have money to invest in them and be forced to wait longer for a small piece of the American pie.

But is all this gloom and doom realistic? Only grandpas and economists talk about great depressions, and BYU students have never lived through one, so perhaps it's hard to imagine and even harder to get overly concerned about. Some economists argue that depression speculation is precisely the panic they have been warning against—just because modern economic trends mirror those of the early 30s does not mean depression is on the way. Back then, financial conditions escalated before the depression hit; today's economy has climbed well above recession levels projected after the 1987 crash.

However, there is something unnerving about America's continued economic well-being. If a major depression isn't on the way, then what can we expect will be the equalizing force for an economy burdened by debt and over-spending? Who's going to pay the bill? For those seniors who have begun the search, but can't seem to find the job, the questions have already begun to be answered.

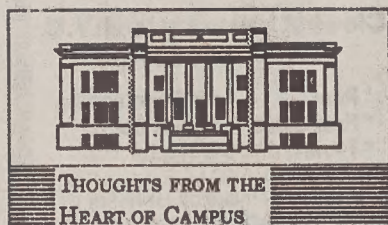

There is one cheerful note for those yet to graduate. If a major depression does hit the economy in the next few years, most students won't own a house or car or anything of value they can lose to a dying economy. But the class of '89, and those following soon thereafter, may be the ones who lose the most and pay the hardest for empty years of supposed wealth in a greedy nation.

SALVADOR RIGHTIST, ALFREDO CRISTIANI

Brigham's 'Y' overlooks polluted valley

A couple of days ago I read Hugh Nibley's essay entitled "Brigham Young on the Environment." Upon finishing the essay I put it down and leaned back in my chair, merely indulging in the fact that I had finished my reading assignment before class. But my complacency soon gave way to an unsettled feeling as I considered how President Young's teachings strongly challenged our environmental practices.

Brigham's outlook on the environment was reverence for the creation of God; his respect for nature was a form of worship. This respect was reflected at the 24th of July celebration of 1860 held at Brighton. The free tickets that President Young issued to the participating Saints had a message printed on them: "All persons are forbidden to make or kindle fires at any place in the canyon, except on the camp ground." (Millennial Star 18:673ff:56) At the end of his speech on that occasion he encouraged all to put out their fires before they left. A reporter from the New York Herald wrote that Brigham stayed behind "to see that all fires were extinguished" and that it was the prophet who "left the last, satisfied that all was right, and that his disciples had enjoyed themselves to their heart's content." (MS 22:702:60)

To invigorate our bodies and our minds Brigham Young would tell us to go outside and breathe some fresh air. But if I were to go for a walk along University Avenue during the morning and evening rush hours I would inhale dangerously high levels of carbon monoxide. Moreover, simply living in Utah Valley exposes me to carcinogenic PM-10, two-thirds of which is produced by Geneva. BYU smokestacks emit 4 percent of the air pollution in this county.

We follow the Calvinist position that everything is created for the sake of mankind and that there are no constraints when man deals with nature, whereas President Young's philosophy departs from traditional western attitudes towards the environment. It is people like Charles Darwin and Buddhist monks that advocate man's kinship with nature and a more reverent feeling towards the earth and all life. This view is more in harmony with Hugh Nibley's observation, "Trees were made in the first instance to be looked at and enjoyed."

Brigham wanted us to appreciate the beauty in nature, to use natural resources wisely, and to practice an ideal higher than base utilitarian Calvinism.

I stood up, went to the east window of my room and looked outside. The bright blue sky contrasted with the evergreen crest of the mountain. The snow was melted almost to the top of the slope, unveiling the brown earth and grass trees that seemed restless for the birth of spring. My eye fell on the giant "Y." It did not seem to fit. It and the road winding up to it were like a scar on the mountain. In the past, I had always identified with the "Y," but this time I looked at it and thought, "That's Brigham Young's initial. I wonder what he would think about having his name cemented to the side of that mountain."

I turned away from the window, feeling unsettled once again. Not only Utah Valley's environmental abuse is perpendicular to Brigham Young's philosophy, but his initial is ironically stuck on its upper right-hand corner.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Get the facts

Dear Editor:

Thank you for being so concerned with the issue of libel, Rick Anderson. Your March 24 letter repeatedly stressed that libel is stating mere accusations without evidence to substantiate the claims. You then asserted that approach is a favorite of the John Birch Society.

As members of the John Birch Society we would like to know where your evidence is to substantiate that? How can you slander the John Birch Society and have the audacity to put its name in the same sentence as "Stalinists."

Have you ever studied the John Birch Society? Have you attended any of our meetings?

The John Birch Society is an educational organization whose motto is: "Less Government, More Responsibility and with God's help a Better World." It works for freedom and the Constitutional republic that our founding fathers set up.

Among defenders of the JBS is the patriot Ezra Taft Benson who has said that he was "... convinced that the John Birch Society was the most effective non-church organization in our fight against creeping socialism and Godless communism." (Address given at the Utah Forum for the American Idea, 11 Feb. 1966)

If you are so concerned with accuracy, please stop your hypocrisy and validate your assertions. Also if you still want to learn more about Martin Luther King, there is an article in The New American magazine on Jan. 13, 1986, which deals with him and his alleged Communist ties.

Insurance

Dear Editor:

While I dislike the paternalistic attitude by the administration (in reference to mandatory health insurance), I ask one question of those irritated at having to purchase health insurance in order to attend BYU: Why don't you have it in the first place? Not carrying health insurance is as irresponsible as not carrying car insurance. I don't see how anyone could have less money than my wife and I, yet we manage to be insured. Who do you expect will pick up the bill if something catastrophic was to happen? The government? The hospital? Your parents? I hate being told what to do as much as anyone—but if we as a society don't start acting more responsible, medical costs will continue to rise and hospitals will continue to fail.

Sean Lynn
Caldwell, Idaho

Library

Dear Editor:

"No services will be given from 10:45 a.m. until after the devotional." This is heard in the library every time there is a devotional. The library doors are locked, the reserve library is completely emptied and you can't get any help. The library workers just sit around not being permitted to leave or to be of any service. Why is this happening to us who are here to get an education? I paid my tuition which ought to guarantee that one can enter a building when needed. Has the principle "freedom of choice" been discontinued? Isn't that being taken away when I am not given the choice to go to the library or attend the devotionals? Sure we can go someplace else to study, but why is the library there if we can't use it when needed?

Teresa Reynolds
Provo

Blind followers

Dear Editor:

So many people in the Church accept counsel from our leaders blindly, assuming that it is right for everyone, period. I tend to disagree. A fine example of this is the counsel not to see R-rated movies.

Although this counsel is good in most cases, I feel that one must decide how this counsel can be applied to their own life. Becoming a "Man of Christ" requires individuality and this is unfortunately a characteristic lacking in the Church today.

Wouldn't non-members be more impressed with those who can interpret the Word themselves, gaining their own testimony of it rather than being brainwashed into doing anything our leaders tell us? If more people would interpret the counsel of the Prophet to apply to their own lives than their neighbor's we would see much self-righteousness and hypocrisy in the Church go away.

I am an adult and I am mature enough to decide what is suitable for my viewing, R-rated or not, without other people telling me if I, as a "good Mormon," can handle it. I appreciate the guidelines, but not the condemnation.

Elizabeth Shephard
Littleton, Colo.

Conference

Dear Editor:

In October Conference last year President Ezra Taft Benson said, "I challenge the homes of Israel to display along their walls great quotations and scenes from the Book of Mormon (Another Testament of Jesus Christ)." Finally in December I decided to get with the program. I went to the BYU Bookstore and bought a sheet of poster material for not favorite quotations, yet I was unable to find one picture of a "scene from the Book of Mormon."

I was amazed that the Lord's University, with Ezra Taft Benson as the chairman, wouldn't have a single picture from the book we're talking about. In December I had to drive to the Mall in Provo to get some. Deseret Books had a huge selection and the bookstore only had three choices. Apparently not a lot of students follow this counsel. The bookstore doesn't encourage it either.

Others are also interested in following the living Prophet. This semester a new group meets on campus. In October Conference 1987, President Benson asked us to study the "divinely inspired Constitution." All are welcome to attend a weekly meeting and study the principles of the Constitution, Thursdays at 7:30 p.m. 258 ELWC.

On my bedroom door is a quotation which says, "And my father dwelt in tents," above the picture of Lehi and his family's boat arriving at the promised land. This semester I also added the quotation, "O be wise, what can I say more?" so enough said.

Carl D. Espinoza

Hoffman, Foster claim top honors

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — "Rain Man," the box-office smash about a conniving car salesman who learns to love his autistic brother, won the Oscar as best picture Wednesday night and brought top honors for actor Dustin Hoffman and director Barry Levinson. Jodie Foster, the victim of a gang rape in "The Accused," was named best actress.

"Rain Man" also brought an award to Ronald Bass and Barry Morrow for their original screenplay. Christopher Hampton's adaptation of his play "Dangerous Liaisons" won for best adaptation.

Geena Davis, the free-spirited dog trainer in "The Accidental Tourist" and Kevin Kline, the wild-eyed, over-sexed safecracker in "A Fish Called Wanda," were surprise winners in supporting roles at the 61st Academy Awards.

"Cruelty might be human and it might be cultural, but it's not acceptable, and that's what this movie is about," said Foster, a former child star who won her first Oscar.

"I'm supposed to be jaded by this time, but I'm not," said Hoffman, who also won the award for "Kramer vs. Kramer" in 1979. He embraced loser Gene Hackman while on his way to the stage, where he basked in a standing ovation.

"First of all, I want to thank Anne Tyler for writing such a wonderful book," Davis said in accepting the first prize of the night at the 61st Academy Awards. She has said she read Tyler's novel when it was first published and coveted the role of Muriel.

The award to Davis drew yelps of approval from the audience of 6,500 in the Shrine Auditorium, possibly because the favorites appeared to have been Frances McDormand for "Mississippi Burning" and Sigourney

Weaver for "Working Girl."

"This is astonishing," said Kline, who also had not been considered a front-runner.

No single picture dominated the first half of the show, with "Rain Man," the odds-on favorite for best picture, coming up short in four categories. It lost the Oscar for film editing to "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," while "The Milagro Beanfield War" won for best score, "Dangerous Liaisons" won for art direction and "Mississippi Burning" for cinematography.

"Liaisons," an ornate drama of drawing room seductions in pre-Revolutionary France, also won for its opulent costumes.

"Bird" won the Oscar for best sound, "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" for sound effects editing and "Beetle-juice" for makeup.

Carly Simon's "Let the River Run," from "Working Girl," was named best song of the year. The academy could find only three songs to nominate this year, instead of the usual five, and didn't see fit to have them performed during the show.

The year's best foreign language film was Denmark's "Pelle the Conqueror" about an exploited farm worker and his son.

Pianist bids Utah farewell

By MOLLY R. LARSON
Universe Staff Writer

In his last performance before going on a world tour, BYU student and Gina Bachauer winner Xiang-Dong Kong will perform a piano recital tonight at 7:30.

Kong is 20 years old and a native of Shanghai, People's Republic of China. He was just accepted to the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia, which is a famous conservatory for young, developing musicians.

Kong said he has only attended BYU for a year and will miss Utah.

"I was very impressed with the people here and was treated very well," he said. He will begin his studies at Curtis Institute in September.

Kong completed music and piano training at the Middle School of the Shanghai Conservatory of Music before entering BYU. He won seventh prize at the Tchaikovsky International Piano Competition in Moscow at age 17. Kong was one of the youngest people ever to enter the competition.

He was also featured with the USSR National Symphony Orchestra in its final concert, which was broadcast over Soviet television and seen around the world.

He beat out 60 contestants from all over the world to win the Gina Bachauer competition in June.

Kong said he can't believe how many people he has met at BYU. "I must have over 100 friends," he said.

Paul Pollei is Kong's piano instructor at BYU. He met Kong in 1985 in Shanghai. Pollei had been touring, giving concerts and teaching classes. He met Kong when Kong played in one of the master classes he taught. He invited Kong to come to BYU.

Kong said Pollei was a big influence on him and helped him to come to the United States. Kong said it has been "wonderful" working with Pollei.

Most recently, Kong has been touring in California and Texas. He will soon leave for Tokyo, Hong Kong and Athens.

Satanic worship did not cause fire, Provo officials say

Provo Police Department officials said Wednesday that rumors of satanic worship-related activities were not the cause of a fire that destroyed an abandoned horse stable over the weekend.

The cause of the fire is being investigated by the Provo Fire and Police Departments and the State Fire Marshal's office. Provo Fire Captain Phil Harris said the cause of the fire initially was listed as "suspicious," and investigators suspected arson.

There have been numerous rumors that satanic rituals were being performed in the barn over the last 12 years, according to Provo Police Captain George Pierpont.

"We've had occasional complaints from the neighbors, but it has been long enough ago that I have a hard time remembering the last time I had a complaint," Pierpont said.

"There was a large amount of graffiti on the walls that had a lot of sexual innuendos as well as satanic innuendos," Harris said.

Rumors had circulated earlier this week that police and fire officials had found the carcass of a dead dog at the barn. "I did not see any carcasses," Harris said. Pierpont said the investigating police officer did not see a dead dog at the scene.

Pierpont said ownership of the barn has not been determined because the property is tied up in litigation.

Earthquake victims get help via satellite

By SHELLY CARTER
Universe Staff Writer

Medical experts from LDS Hospital and the University of Utah Health Sciences Center will soon begin treating patients in the Soviet Republic of Armenia via a "telemedicine space bridge," said Dr. Terry Clemmer.

Clemmer, chief of critical care medicine at LDS Hospital and associate professor of medicine at the U of U, said NASA, Comsat Corp. and Intelsat satellite companies will link by satellite with doctors in Armenia who are treating victims of the December 1988 earthquake.

The main cost of the operation is the ground-stationed satellite at NASA, said Clemmer. NASA is providing a compatible satellite ground terminal to be installed in Yerevan to link Armenian physicians with United States medical facilities.

"This type of linkup would be an absolute necessity for future space stations," said Clemmer. If a person based on a space station were to become ill, it could cost over one-half billion dollars to get him back to earth for treatment. Future space stations with a large number of personnel will be able to use similar satellite links to treat patients.

Evette Fulton, public relations specialist for Comsat Corp., said the company will donate three to four hours of satellite time per day for about 90 days. "The regular charge is $252 for the first 10 minutes and then $21 per minute," said Fulton. Doctors from the U of U, LDS Hospital and the other facilities involved will donate their time and the technology used at each station, said Clemmer. Physicians will be able to see patients on television, consult with Armenian doctors during surgeries, view x-rays and consult on office visits.

The Armenians will also have portable cameras with capabilities of going to areas away from their hospital base, he said.

"The Soviet Government and international relief efforts have been heroic and much appreciated," Dr. Clemmer said, "but the Armenians still feel access to expertise in specific areas would be very helpful in overcoming difficulties and in rebuilding and strengthening their health system following the earthquake."

Other medical facilities working with the telemedicine link are the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences in Bethesda, the University of Maryland Institute for Emergency Medical Services System in Baltimore and the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston.

JUST PLAYIN'

Scott Thomas has plenty of time to play a little jazz. Being a pre-law student keeps him busy all right, but he can play it cool during school because of a hot summer job. Last year, Scott's first on the Living Scriptures Summer Program, he earned $11,235.84 in 15 weeks. Not bad when you consider he won an additional $1,800 in cash, merchandise and a trip to Hawaii for two. He does exceptionally well during the summer, as do our other associates, because they average between $6,000-$7,000. This income will allow you the freedom to enjoy the finer aspects of colleges life—like just playin'. Of course, Scott will be back again this summer with the rest of the band, taking their show on the road. Come to the brief, no-hype meeting listed below so that next fall you can be playin' a tune like Scott instead of singin' the blues.
